Open to the public

The history of efforts to achieve food security, reduce obesity, and make healthy food accessible to all has been long and convoluted. In spite of extraordinary efforts by communities, non-profit organizations, and all levels of government, success has been mixed. This talk will consider both the roles of economic inequality and the weak collaboration among food system stakeholders as causes for our lackluster progress.

Join the John Glenn College of Public Affairs and Mark Winne for an additional event:

Building a National Food Policy from the Ground Up: If the Feds Can't Do It, Can We?

February 23 • 5:30 - 7:00 PM • 130 Page Hall: 1810 College Road
